

In-State Angels

We think there should be a resource that demystifies the process---shedding light on how to legitimately and predictably earn in-state status. In-State Angels hopes to be that resource with information and solutions designed to help students explore and earn in-state tuition in states and universities across the country.

While not every student is going to be a good candidate, those who are stand to save enormously and it can make all the difference between a student attending their 3rd choice college vs. 1st choice college.

What makes a good candidate for in-state?

The process favors those who are more mature and independent than average.

Top factors that contribute to success:

- a sincere intention to remain indefinitely in a new state after college
- being financially responsible and at least partly self-supporting with student loans or otherwise
- willingness to work at least a little bit while in school
- openness to potentially going to school less than full-time for at least a year

The more these factors are true for a student, the greater number of colleges are unlocked to a student.

Learn more about earning in-state:

In-State 101

Crash course guide how to get in-state tuition

State-by-state difficulty map

50 states, 50 sets of rules.

Free 1st Step

A student can share a little about their unique situation, and we will tell them their next best step toward in-state.

How much can a student save by earning in-state status?

The national average is 13,310/year but can be as much as 29,662/year depending on the college. Here are a few examples:

University of Oregon: 20,970/year savings
University of South Carolina: 18,282/year savings
Montana State University: 14,589/year savings
University of Texas: 25,044/year savings
University of Arkansas: 12,090/year savings
University of Washington: 21,117/year savings

In-State Angels

Founded 2011

BBB A+ Rating

Member of NACAC and HECA

Has saved students over 4,500,000 in tuition to date

contact@instateangels.com

303-495-7582 x723